Keep it kosher

The Capital Region Farmers' Market at Exhibition Park is continuing efforts to ensure this stays a genuine farmers' market, and is not hijacked by big commercial interests. It has appointed a producers' panel, made up of 13 stallholders, who have their ears to the ground and expertise in growing. With their advice, the Rotary Club of Hall, which runs the markets, can ensure producers are selling direct. This follows the move to split the markets into two sheds – one for growers and the other for stalls run by non-growers.
